Feature extraction refers to the process of transforming raw data into numerical features that can be processed while preserving the information in the original data set. It yields better results than applying machine learning directly to the raw data. Feature extraction can be accomplished manually or automatically:

Feature extraction is the procedure of selecting a set of  $F$  features from a data set of  $N$  features,  $F < N$ , thus the cost of some evaluation functions or measures will be optimized over the space of all possible feature subsets. The aim of the feature extraction procedure is to remove the nondominant features and accordingly reduce the training time and mitigate the complexity of the developed ...
